DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This small, two story frame house faces south towards Rt. 6. The house is well-built, and, though not occupied, is well-maintained. It consists of a principal block of two stories which is two bays in length, and a one story kitchen, the eastern third of which has been added recently. To the rear lengthth has been added a shed room which served as the kitchen. The overall dimensions of the principal block and gable end kitchen were 34'1" x 14'4".

The interior consisted of one room downstairs in the main block with a boxed stright flight of stairs ascending the west gable end wall. The walls were lathed and plastered throughout the house. The kitchen also consisted of one room as did the upstairs. Stoves heated the kitchen and sitting room downstairs as well as the upstairs chamber.

The shed porches along the facade of the main block and the kitchen have been added, according to the owner.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Based upon the structural evidence and especially upon the oral testimony of the owner, Harold Cooksey, whose father owned this farm in earlier years, this house was probably built near the turn of the 20th century. Though its design resembles that of land small landowning farmers of that period (see houses at Beachville, Md. i.e., STMA - 283), this house was built as a tenant dwelling, according to Cooksey. Some of the workers were itinerant, such as lumbermen who cut timber on the Cooksey farm, while others were longer-term residents and worked as tenant farmers. According to Cooksey, both black and white families have lived in this house. It therefore represents a type of house occupied by the rural working class of both races.
